

ABOUT THE BOOK

The seminar/Conference will explore the evolution of Indian Fiction in English, from its colonial beginnings portrayed in the novel "Rajmohan's Wife" to its current transnational landscape. Influential writers like Mulk Raj Anand, Raja Rao, and R. K. Narayan, imbued with Gandhian ideals, shaped the genre during colonial rule. Mahatma Gandhi, a prominent political figure, left an indelible mark on Indian society through his tireless efforts for independence and development. His profound influence extends across various disciplines such as history, politics, philosophy, literature, and sociology. The seminar /Conference aims to delve into Gandhian themes in Indian English literature, particularly during the anti-colonial movement of 1918-1922, shedding new light on his legacy in contemporary literary discourse.
